ICY ROADS CAUSE AUTOS TO SKID INTO TRAINS

Orland and Palos Park men figured in serious auto accidents the past week, but were fortunate to escape injuries. Jack Erton of Orland township while driving on the Southwest Highway near Western avenue one night last week ran into a freight train when his car skidded on the icy pavement when he attempted to stop. The car was badly damaged, but Mr. Erton escaped injury.

While Ray Ludwig of Orland Park was driving on 143rd street to the Orland Legion Post masquerade at Bachelor Grove, the car skidded on the icy pavement and turned over twice into a ditch along 143rd street east of Keane avenue. Mr. Ludwig crawled out of the wreck unhurt and got to the masquerade with the assistance of a ride by a passing autoist.

George Munch of Palos Park is also reported to have run into the side of a train when his car skidded on the icy pavement. He was not injured but the car was badly damaged.

New Lenox In Need Of Fire Protection

New Lenox has made much progress within the past few years in the way of growth. With the opening of subdivisions the population rapidly increased until now New Lenox is the largest unincorporated village in Will County and this part of the state.

There are two things that New Lenox needs badly and that is fire protection and street lights.

The fire protection question it is said by some of the public spirited citizens could be handled with a regular fire truck equipped with chemical tanks. Altho New Lenox has no water works, yet a fire truck equipped with regular fire hose could pump water from wells, cisterns and tanks. Some of the residents have also suggested that a big pipe be laid from some point along the Lincoln Highway to Hickory Creek so in case of fire water could be pumped from the creek.

Some time back this matter was given consideration and a move made to raise funds for buying a chemical truck, but nothing further developed.

It is said fire insurance rates would be decreased if there was some sort of fire protection. The idea may be taken up again in the future.

Former New Lenox Resident Dies

Mrs. Marie A. Timm, aged forty-two years, of Manhattan, a well known former New Lenox resident, died in St. Joseph's hospital in Joliet Feb. 8th.

The deceased was the daughter of the late I. P. Pease of New Lenox township. Surviving are her husband Edward A. Timm; one son Kenneth; her mother, Mrs. Mahala Pease; one brother Charles Pease of New Lenox; three sisters, Mrs. Thomas Pugh, Mrs. Charles Carlson, all of New Lenox and Mrs. Albert Cooper of Rockford.

Funeral services were held Tuesday morning at ten o'clock in the Christ Episcopal church in Joliet. Burial in Woodlawn cemetery, Joliet.

Sails On Visit To Germany

Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Geuther of Frankfort entertained the Young Men's Bible Class of the St. Peter's Evangelical church of Frankfort on Tuesday, Feb. 5th at a farewell party in honor of August Eilers who has gone to Bremen, Germany for an extended visit with his parents, and other relatives. Games were played after which a lunch was served, also an address was given by the Rev. G. Gerhold of the St. Peter Evangelical church wishing Mr. Eilers a safe and happy journey.

Mrs. Wm. Hentsch Dies In Chicago Hospital Suddenly

Mrs. Wm. Hentsch of Orland died of scarlet fever in a Chicago hospital Sunday.

Surviving are the husband, Wm. Hentsch, an infant son; her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Parker of Orland Park; two sisters, Mrs. Herman Kruspe of Orland Park and Mrs. Blanche Keuch of Blue Island. The funeral, which was private, was held Tuesday afternoon with burial in the Tinley Park cemetery. Before her marriage, the deceased, was Leona Parker.

THE UPSIDE DOWN TICKET

PORT WAYNE, IND., Feb. — "Upside down" was the verdict of many easterners upon the announcement of the Republican ticket of 1860 which had Abraham Lincoln as Presidential nominee and Hannibal Hamlin as Vice Presidential nominee, according to Dr. Louis A. Warren, director of the Lincoln National Life Insurance Company's museum here. Dr. Warren pointed out that the general feeling in the east, especially among members of congress, was that Hamlin, a native of Hamden, Maine, should have headed the ticket.

"Although Lincoln and Hamlin were the same age, a comparison of their political achievements up to 1860 shows to the great disadvantage of Lincoln," Dr. Warren said. His investigations reveal that Hamlin had served two terms in the House of Representatives, twelve years in the Senate, and had been elected governor of his native state. Over against this record was Lincoln's single term in the House of Representatives.

The beautiful colonial birthplace of Hamlin in Maine and the humble log cabin in which Lincoln was born in Kentucky was, according to Dr. Warren, another contrast which contributed to the feeling that a serious mistake had been made at the Chicago Convention by getting "the cart before the horse."

"History, however, proved the ticket was right side up," Dr. Warren said. "The little log cabin birthplace of Abraham Lincoln, the sixteenth President of the United States, has become the best-known dwelling in all the world."

MOKENA PTA TO OBSERVE DADS NIGHT

The Mokena PTA will honor the fathers of Mokena school children on Tuesday evening, Feb. 19th at 7:30 p. m., and all men and women are invited.

A special and very fine program has been arranged by the teachers and it will be presented by the school children, each room taking a part in this program.

In addition to the program a very prominent man will be the speaker of the evening and he will talk on a subject of special interest.

Last, but not least the committee in charge together with the ladies of the PTA will serve refreshments. Every man in the Mokena school district is invited and all should attend. How about men will you be there? Answer: Yes, yes, yes.

Orland PTA Celebrates Birthday

The Orland Park PTA observed Founders Day and the celebration of the seventh birthday of the local organization at the school auditorium Thursday night of this week. A very fine program was presented. A large candle for the Founders Day and seven smaller candles for the birthday of the local group added to the attractiveness of the program.

During its seven years of existence the Orland Park PTA has done excellent work and has been instrumental in providing the following for the Orland Park public school:

Playground equipment, athletic equipment, manual training equipment, flag pole and flag, drinking fountain, tennis court equipment, concrete sidewalk from school building to street line, book cases, filing cabinets, gas stove, pictures, books, maps, mirrors, lavatory equipment, microscope, music, Victrola records, piano tuning and conditioning same, clinic furniture and equipment, magazine subscriptions, plates, cups, spoons, instruments for toy orchestra, various pieces of furniture and 102 folding chairs.

Frankfort Foreman 30 Years, Promoted

Charles Pfeifer of Frankfort who has been in the employ of the E. J. & E., railroad for thirty years, received notice this week that he has been promoted to supervisor of the entire division and will take over his new position sometime this month. He and his family will remove to Joliet where his headquarters will be. Mr. Pfeifer has resided in Frankfort for 28 years.

Tinley Citizens Com. To Make Report

Friday of this week it is a month since the Tinley Park public school has been operated on private funds. Next a report by the committee in charge of this fund, will make a report of the handling of

Orland Park Woman's Club Meeting Instructive

The American Home department had charge of the meeting of the Orland Park Woman's Club, held Thursday afternoon in Creer hall, with Mrs. Harold Kinney, chairman, in charge.

The president, Mrs. Ella Loebe, opened the meeting and conducted the business session.

Announcement was made by Mrs. Edgar Graves, third district chairman of the Conservation department, of a contest in that department and the third district has undertaken as their contribution to the contest, to plant oak trees and shrubs along both sides of Harlem avenue from 143rd street to 123rd street. Each tree will cost a dollar or $1.50 and each member in the district is giving 5 cents to pay for this work. This will be started at once.

In order to raise money for the local club and for the Conservation department, the Orland Woman's Club will hold a public card and bunco party in Creer hall on Friday evening, March 1. Mrs. Maddox was appointed chairman of the tickets for this party and Mrs. Geo. Cox, Mrs. G. J. Gee, Jr., and Mrs. Edgar Graves, in charge of the arrangements, etc.

Mrs. Loebe announced the district meeting at Hamilton Park, on February 19th and also of the Chicago Tribune Conference on Home Problems held February 27th and 28th, in Chicago.

At the close of the business session, Mrs. Loebe turned the meeting over to the program chairman, Mrs. Paul Sanders, who introduced the speaker of the afternoon, Mrs. P. A. McCaskey, of Palos Park who spoke on the home. She raised the question of what makes a home?

Mrs. McCaskey spoke on color in the home, of arrangement of furnishings and then asked each one to tell of their pet economy in home making. All enjoyed very much the speaker and the thoughts she gave to dwell upon.

After the meeting was adjourned, the guests, fifty in number, viewed and examined the many and beautiful exhibits which many had brought. Quilts, beautiful, crocheted, knitted, pieced, in silk, satin and prints. Shawls, hand embroidered scarfs, home spun and woven table cloths and bedspreads, of long ago. Many were the priceless exhibits on view, some of Indian handwork. Some dollies which were knitted just recently by an old lady in Chicago who just had celebrated her 99th birthday and who knits all day and each day.

There were five luncheon and dinner tables properly set, in lovely colors. Also wall panels and corners in a room showing how to properly furnish such places.

The hostesses, Mrs. Ted Rust, Mrs. Wymer and Mrs. Wm. Semler served coffee and cookies which brought to a close a most pleasant and profitable afternoon.

Orland Couple Plan To Celebrate 60th Wedding Day

Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Sayers, (their health permitting,) will celebrate their Sixtieth Wedding Anniversary with "Open House," on Sunday afternoon, February 17th, from two o'clock, at James Creer's, Orland Park, Illinois.

NEW LENOX TO HAVE HOT CAUCUS FEB. 23

New Lenox township is going to witness a very lively caucus on Saturday, February 23rd, when candidates for the offices of supervisor, highway commissioner and school trustee will be nominated.

The big fight is centering on supervisor and highway commissioner. Fred A. Francis, present supervisor is a candidate for re-election. Joseph Kestel and John Conover have also announced their candidacies for this office.

Mr. Francis, the present supervisor has served this township for sometime and has played quite an important part on the county board and as chairman of the Will County Bond Issue Committee has had much to do with the construction of hard roads in Will County the past several years.

Ernest Oram who has served New Lenox township well as highway commissioner for 22 years is also a candidate for re-election. A. Walsh, member of one of the old time families of New Lenox township and widely known, is also a candidate for this office.

The Caucus will be held in the Colonial Hall in New Lenox from 7 a. m., to 5 p. m. on February 23rd.

New Lenox Scout Troop Wins Much Coveted Honor

The New Lenox and Plainfield Boy Scout troops have been granted the honor award by Scout Commissioner Paul Ahman and Field Commissioners Charles McKeown, De Loss Weyant and Paul Mapes.

This is the highest distinction possible for a scout troop to attain. New Lenox troop was organized by Fred Haynes two years ago and has made great strides toward high recognition in that short time.

Withdraws From Frankfort Highway Commissioner Race

The race for the office of highway commissioner in Frankfort township is giving promise of being very hotly contested.

Report has it that Henry Bruggerman and Jerry Hossbach of Frankfort are also candidates for this office.

Fred Steinhagen who has been in the field as a candidate for this office, announces that he has withdrawn from the race.

Frankfort Band Minstrel Is A Brilliant Success

One of the best affairs yet seen at the Mokena school auditorium was the "White Coons' Minstrel" put on by the Frankfort school band last Friday night. The music was excellent and the minstrel jokes, songs, dancing and songs were very good and much credit is due to Mr. Hill, the Frankfort school principal, Mr. Wight, the band director and last but not least, the members of the entire musical ensemble.

The program was so good that it ended too soon.

The auditorium was packed. Both Frankfort and Mokena were well represented.

The minstrel may be repeated in other towns if no changes are made in the plans.

Frankfort has just cause to be proud of her musical ensemble and the fine talent it possesses.

News Brevities of Illinois

United States District Judge Charles G. Briggie is looking for his automobile. He parked behind the Federal building at Springfield and some one took it.

The Merchants and Farmers State Bank of Grayslake will pay depositors in full and close its doors, it was announced. The 100 per cent payment will be made despite the fact that the bank has gone profitless for two years.

Clara Shelton, fifteen, of West Frankfort was exonerated by a coroner's jury. She was charged with killing John Taylor, thirty-two, in defense of her mother, Mrs. Ada Shelton, forty-five, whom Taylor attacked while intoxicated.

The theory that two bandits who robbed the State Bank of Tivoli, Ill., of $2,000 might have been Alvin Karpis and Harry Campbell was dispelled with the identification of a photograph of Ira Craver, forty, escaped Michigan convict, as the leader of the pair.

Seven men and a nineteen-year-old girl, alleged members of a counterfeiting ring which circulated "split" currency by changing one dollar bills into fives and twenties, were named in a batch of 70 indictments returned by a United States District grand jury at Springfield. The eight are alleged to have operated in the vicinity of Quincy and in towns along the Mississippi river. Their arrest is said by federal agents to have stopped a huge counterfeiting plot.

A bombing in which 50 sticks of dynamite were used had exacted a toll of 3,000 dead crows in the state's first successful drive against the "crow menace." The bombing at Beardsville marked continuation of the state's annual war on crows, regarded as a major farm pest. The explosion brought hundreds of calls to Decatur police. Residents here and at Forsyth and Warrensburg reported their houses shaken by the blast. The bombs, strung in a clump of hedges on a farm three miles from here, which the crows infested, were touched off by Deputy Game Warden Clyde Warner and Dixie Davis, and Paul S. Smith, district representative of the state department of conservation.

A delegation of 200 Fulton county citizens petitioned Gov. Henry Horner to include three highway projects, totaling 34 miles, in the state's 1935 construction program. Representatives Frank W. McClure of Abingdon, Rodd Cutler of Lewiston and Ray Simkins of Maquon, headed the group. Governor Horner, after a conference with the delegation directed Ernst Lieberman, chief highway engineer, to submit a report concerning the necessity for the roads. The projects urged by the delegation included 13 miles of pavement from Vermont south to Browning by way of Astoria; 11 miles of pavement from Fairview to Maquon, and extension of Route 95 from Cuba to Canton, a distance of ten miles.

Allotment of $573,746.69 has been made to Illinois counties from the motor vehicle fuel tax paid into the state treasury during December, it was announced by K. L. Ames, Jr., director of finance, state of Illinois. Of the total, the state holds in reserve $202,700 for interest and retirement of the $20,000,000 relief bond issue and $41,590 for interest and retirement of the $30,000,000 relief bond issue. Cook county contributes $212,690.60 toward the two bond funds from its total allotment of $268,261.95. Seventeen counties have been allotted more than $5,000 for the month. In addition to Cook, six counties were allotted more than $10,000, as follows: St. Clair $12,030.65; Peoria $11,955.85; Kane $11,773.93; Winnebago $11,287.19; Lake $10,963.05; and Madison $10,678.25. The smallest allotment, $258.50 was made to Pope county.

Producers who sell agricultural products to users or consumers are liable for Retailers' Occupation tax on such sales, it was held in a ruling announced by S. L. Nudelman, assistant to K. L. Ames, Jr., director of finance, state of Illinois. Among the products designated were milk, other dairy products, meats, seeds, plants, flowers, eggs, young trees and "such items of tangible personal property." The ruling said that persons making sales of the above articles to users or consumers become "engaged in the business" of selling such property when they advertise or in any way solicit the sale or offer such products for sale. Dairy farmers who sell milk to consumers and farmers who sell products for consumption from roadside stands, vending vehicles or at established markets were cited as examples of those liable for the tax. Agricultural associations which conduct markets were also placed in this classification, and it was held, the manager or secretary of such an association would be required to file returns, but if an agricultural producer rents or leases space in such a market place and sells commodities in his own name he becomes liable.

Ernst Lieberman, chief highway engineer, said that the thick coating of ice on Illinois pavements has been the worst ever encountered. All employees have been assigned to spread cinders and sand to reduce the skidding hazard for automobiles.

Seventeen persons were overcome and the lives of fifty-five others were endangered by escaping gas at the Whiteside county farm for the poor and aged near Sterling when subzero weather burst a commercial gas main. Many of the aged men and women were forced outside into a 16 degree temperature.

Congress Keeps the Printing Presses Busy

OUR congressmen are a loquacious lot, and their speeches, delivered on the floor and "extended" in the Record, together with the thousands of bills they introduce, keep the great government printing office exceedingly busy. The men in this picture are working on the Congressional Record, and as the session proceeds their labor grows heavier.

FARMER BROWN FOOLS PETER RABBIT

WHEN the snow is deep Peter Rabbit really has to work for a living. Perhaps this is a good thing. If he didn't he might grow too fat to keep out of the way of Reddy Fox. There are times when Peter has to eat whatever he can, and very often there isn't much of anything for him but the bark of young trees. It is at such times that Peter gets into mischief, for there is no bark he likes better than that of young fruit trees.

Now you know what happens when the bark is taken off all the way around the trunk of a tree. That tree dies. It dies for the simple reason that it is up the inner layer of bark that the life-giving sap travels in the spring and summer. Of course when a strip of bark has been taken off all the way around near the base of a tree, the sap cannot go up and the tree must die.

Not far from the Old Orchard Farmer Brown had set out a young orchard. Peter knew all about that young orchard, for he had visited it many times in summer. Then there had been plenty of green clover and other green things to eat, and Peter had never been so much as tempted to sample the bark of these young trees. But now things were very different, and it was seldom that Peter knew what it was to have a full stomach. He kept thinking of that young orchard. He knew that if he were wise he would keep away from there. But the more he thought of it the more it seemed to him that he just must have some of that tender young bark. So just at dusk one evening Peter started for the young orchard.

He got there in safety and his eyes sparkled as he hopped over to the nearest young tree. But when he reached it Peter had a dreadful disappointment. All around the trunk of that young tree was wire netting.

Peter couldn't get even a nibble of that bark. He tried the next tree with no better results. Then he hurried from tree to tree, but not a taste of bark could he get. You see, Farmer Brown knew all about Peter's liking for the bark of young trees, and he had been wise enough to protect his young fruit trees.

Peter didn't give up until he had visited every tree. Then, too disappointed for words, he turned and hopped lipperty-lipperty over to the Old Orchard. As he passed a certain big apple tree he was startled by a voice.

"What's the matter, Peter," said the voice. "You don't look happy."

HIS MOTHER

By ANNE CAMPBELL

ONCE, just as if she knew the years ran fast; His mother took his baby hand in hers, And in the attic way, where paint was fresh, She laid his hand. . . . Now, stealing through the firs The vagrant sunbeams come, and on the wall They trace that print of childhood first of all.

He is a man, and seldom does he go Back to the home his father's father planned; But once he told me, in a quiet way, Of that remembered imprint of his hand. "To think it is still there, and mother dead! And yet her love surrounds me still," he said.

QUESTION BOX by ED WYNN, The Perfect Fool

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I am a young man but am always in ill health. It may be the climate here in New York. I will go to any town you may suggest that is very healthful. Yours truly,

D. PRESSED.

Answer: The healthiest town I know of is Crum City, Wyo. This town is so healthy they had to kill two people last week, just to start a cemetery.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I am a young man eighteen years of age. Because of my health I have to quit work a great deal thereby losing a lot of money. I am out of employment at present but have two positions offered to me. One job is for $12 a week and one for $17.50 a week. Which job shall I take?

Yours truly,

P. KULIER.

Answer: By all means take the job for $12.00 a week because when you are sick and have to quit your job you will not be losing as much money as you would if you were getting $17.50 a week.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I have been going with a young girl for about one year. We were always together until she graduated from high school about six months ago and secured a position. Now she passes me right by. If I talk to her she won't answer me. What can the answer be? Sincerely,

G. OGRAPHY.

Answer: You say she was all right when you went to school together but now that she is working she won't answer you. Quite simple. She must be employed as a telegraph operator.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

A friend of mine told me that he saw a man "run over himself." I told him he was crazy. Now he will not speak to me. Do you think it possible for a man to "run over himself"? Truly yours,

I. BALL.

Answer: Sure it is possible. I know of such a case. A friend of mine was driving a car. He stopped it in front of a candy store, jumped out, went into the candy store and asked for a pack of cigarettes. There was only one clerk in the store and he told my friend that if he wanted cigarettes he would have to go across the street to the cigar store for them. My friend then asked the clerk if he would not run over to the cigar store for him, and the clerk told my friend that he could not leave the candy store alone and run over to the cigar store for the cigarettes; so my friend "ran over himself."

WHEN YOU TAKE A LAXATIVE

... use a spoon

It isn't what brand of laxative you take that's so important—it's the form. A liquid laxative can be taken in any required amount. If only a little is needed, you need never take a bit too much.

Doctors favor the easily measured liquid laxatives. Instead of any form that does not encourage variation from the fixed dose. A fixed dose may be an overdose for you—or your child.

Always remember this one thing about constipation: the secret of any real relief is reduced dosage. Give the bowels only as much help as may be needed, and less help as the need grows less. You will find Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin an excellent aid in regulating the bowels. It contains senna and cascara (natural laxatives) and it will clear-up any bilious, sluggish condition without upset. Delightful taste, and pleasant action. Your druggist has it.

Washington.—Representative Fish, a New York Republican, has renewed his fight against the radicals whom he charged with having bored into positions of responsibility. In so doing, the New York house member has stirred up a veritable avalanche of reviews, surveys and explorations of what is going on of a socialistic nature in the government. Mr. Fish charged on the floor of the house that some of the New Dealers were making cash contributions to the "reds" and proceeded to name them.

The house speech by Mr. Fish in a general way called attention to the various movements going on that can properly be described as radical in every respect. His attack directed the attention of observers here to some phases of administration policies that thus far have excited little comment.

For many months, of course, the activities of the Agricultural Adjustment administration have been subjected to the criticism that they constitute regimentation of the farmers, that is, a general program that holds down good farmers to the level of the haphazard type in the agricultural industry. Likewise there have been attacks on the methods employed by the Reconstruction Finance corporation which dominates the affairs of some four thousand banks as a result of loans to them and is gradually expanding its sphere of influence among other industries to which loans have been made.

The senate committee on munitions, headed by Senator Nye of North Dakota, appears to be headed for a recommendation that all munitions and ship yards be government controlled if not government owned, and only a few days ago the congress enacted a law extending for two years the operations of the Reconstruction Finance corporation so that it may continue the government influence it has wielded heretofore.

On top of these, Mr. Roosevelt has asked the congress to appropriate almost $5,000,000,000 for his use in the general recovery program and has virtually demanded that this fund be made available to him without strings attached. In other words, the President desires to expend this money as he sees fit, whether it meets with congressional approval or not.

We hear also much discussion of administration policies and legislative proposals providing penalties of a serious character as punishment for those who dare to go contrary to the general recovery laws as advanced by the President. These penalties, fines for the most part, are being described in some quarters as a form of Hitler terrorism. The administration stands on the ground that it must have complete dominance if its schemes are to be successful, but the fact remains that it is prepared by virtue of the punishment available for its use to take away vast sums of money from the industry or individual which objects to government methods. There is arising more and more criticism of the extreme punishment employed in the New Deal legislation and unless I miss my guess badly this feature of the New Deal will flare back upon its sponsors in a manner most unwelcome to the brain trusters.

In connection with the President's plan to have congress provide him with the $5,000,000,000 fund to use in his discretion, opposition has arisen with some new arguments. While the President constantly is repeating his assertion that the administrative branches of the government can accomplish more with a free hand than by having the money earmarked by congress for specific use, critics are charging that the President's proposal means putting the government further into business. For example, the senate appropriations committee uncovered information the other day while considering the $5,000,000,000 bill that indicated the existence of a plant by which the federal government would engage in the distribution and sale of gasoline.

It takes no stretch of the imagination to see how this move links with the previous efforts of Secretary Ickes, as oil administrator, to control the whole oil industry. By the distribution and sale of gasoline, the government can enforce regulations by competition which the Supreme court said were unconstitutional. Its control would be exercised through damping up the stocks of gasoline, and oil companies, privately owned, would find themselves at the mercy of government bureaucrats.

There are many other features of the $5,000,000,000 bill against which fire of the opposition has been directed, but it seems safe to say that congress will yield to the Presidential demand and pass the appropriations measure rather near the form desired by the Chief Executive.

With respect to the operation of "reds" in the government as charged by Mr. Fish, Washington long has been deluged with rumors of radical activities. Except for the charges by Dr. William Wirt, the Gary, Ind., school superintendent, Mr. Fish's accusations are the first to place the finger on names. The New Yorker charged on the floor of the house that Robert Marshall, field director for the bureau of Indian affairs and Gardner Jackson, deputy administrative counsel of the consumers division in the Agricultural Adjustment administration, among others, had made cash contributions to the veterans rank and file committee. He asserted that these contributions were made "for the purpose of instigating a bonus march of communists on Washington," and it is to be remembered that the great bonus march of three years ago was headed by the veterans rank and file committee.

Mr. Fish described Mr. Marshall as one of the younger members of the brain trust and asserted that "most of the members" of the brain trust are or have been active in the American civil liberties union.

The representative cited among those in the brain trust who, he said, were active in the civil liberties union the following: Prof. Rexford Guy Tugwell, undersecretary of agriculture; Donald R. Richberg, director of the National Emergency council and the so-called No. 2 man in the administration; Robert Fechner, Director of the Civilian Conservation corps; Prof. Paul H. Douglas, of the National Recovery administration; Dr. Frederic C. Howe, consumers counsel of the Agricultural Adjustment administration; Nathan R. Margold, of the Interior department; James M. Landis, a member of the Federal Securities and Exchange commission and a former member of the federal trade commission; and John A. Lapp, described as an impartial Presidential representative in the National Recovery administration.

After some 12 years of consideration, the senate has refused to approve American membership in the World Court. In rejecting the President's request for ratification of American adherence to that court the upper house of congress gave the administration its first important setback. And it was an important defeat for Mr. Roosevelt because no one can tell now whether the President is going to maintain the firm grip hitherto held on the senate.

Four Presidents—Harding, Coolidge, and Hoover, Republicans, and Roosevelt—have requested senate ratification and four Presidents have had the thing tossed back to them after bitter battles. This time, as heretofore, the senate rejected the proposal on the ground that the United States was being led into the back door of the League of Nations and all will remember how stubbornly the senate resisted entry into the League of Nations when Woodrow Wilson was President. The same arguments were used as have been used before, namely, that if the United States adhered to the permanent court of international justice (the formal title of the court) the country would be catapulted into the midst of all of Europe's entanglements, jealousies and diplomatic chicanery.

Senator Borah of Idaho, one of the leading opponents of court entry, concluded his argument in the senate with the assertion that the World Court was a court of war and not of peace.

Proponents of the court have maintained constantly that the United States could accomplish much toward world peace by participating in court adjudication of controversies. Opponents insisted we should let well enough alone and maintain our isolation. Only through that manner, they argued, can the United States avoid loss of its sovereignty through the dictates of the court decision.

Joseph B. Eastman, federal co-ordinator of railroads, has proposed to congress a new plan for control of the whole structure of transportation in this country. With the approval of the President, Mr. Eastman has offered bills for federal regulation of motor busses and trucks, for the reorganization of the Interstate Commerce commission and establishment of a federal co-ordinator of transportation as a permanent office, compensation for dismissed railroad employees displaced through co-ordination of operation, a revision of the bankruptcy act relating to railroads, provision for the commission to prescribe minimum as well as maximum joint rail and water rates, provision for elimination of alleged benefits or prejudice as to ports and gateways and to limit the right to reparation for damage due to violations of the interstate commerce laws.

The co-ordinator's proposals resulted from a comprehensive study of the general problems relating to transportation. It was probably the most extensive report on these questions that congress ever has received. Certainly, there can be no lack of information available for use by congress if it determines to enact railroad legislation at this session. Whether such legislation will get through is yet problematical. The consensus seems to be that there will be regulation of the motor trucks and busses, but how far beyond that the congress will go appears to depend upon the President's ability to gain a rubber stamp on his program.

With respect to the operation of "reds" in the government as charged by Mr. Fish, Washington long has been deluged with rumors of radical activities. Except for the charges by Dr. William Wirt, the Gary, Ind., school superintendent, Mr. Fish's accusations are

PETER TEACHES GOOD CITIZENSHIP

LESSON TEXT—1 Peter 2:11-17; 4:1-5.
GOLDEN TEXT—Love worketh no ill to his neighbor: therefore love is the fulfilling of the law. Romans 13:10.
PRIMARY TOPIC—A Letter From Peter.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Peter Becomes a Teacher.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Makes a Good Citizen.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Responsibilities of a Good Citizen.

In order to get an intelligent grasp of today's lesson one must get a view of the entire Epistle as to its purpose and method. The purpose was to establish all who were passing through suffering and testing (see 1:7; 3:14; 4:12; 5:10-12).

The principles of Christian behavior set forth in this text are of a broader scope than citizenship. They embrace, 1. Behavior as Pilgrims and Sojourners (vv. 11, 12).

Christians are really sojourners on the earth. They have not their permanent home here. They are journeying through the earth on their way to their eternal home in the heavens. Their heavenly citizenship (Phil. 3:20) should constrain them to the maintenance of conduct consistent with their high calling.

1. Abstain from fleshly lusts (v. 11). The term "lusts" here includes the entire army of unclean forces springing from our carnal natures. They are enumerated in Galatians 5:19-21.

2. Behavior among the Gentiles or heathen (v. 12). The word conversation here means behavior. Christians are under obligation to so live as to render it impossible for the world to speak evil against them as evil-doers.

11. Behavior as Citizens (vv. 13-17).

While the Christian's true citizenship is in heaven, he has a responsibility as a citizen on the earth during his earthly sojourn. He should be in submission to properly constituted authority.

1. Obey all requirements of civil rulers (v. 13). Fidelity to Christ is shown by loyalty to civil authority. The intelligent Christian recognizes the necessity of government and graciously submits to those in authority over him, regardless of the form of government. His duties as a citizen he performs as the Lord's free man, not through servile fear. Government even of a low order is better than anarchy. Free submission to governmental authority puts to silence the ignorance of foolish men (vv. 15, 16).

2. Honor all men (v. 17). The Christian sees in every man the image of God and will, therefore, give him the honor due him. This applies to all relations wherein we touch human life.

3. Love the brotherhood (v. 17). The brotherhood is composed of those who are children of God by faith in Jesus Christ.

4. Fear God (v. 17). This means to recognize God's sovereignty, righteousness, and holiness, and properly to reverence him.

5. Honor the king (v. 17). This had a peculiar significance at the time this was written, because in all probability the wicked Nero was then reigning as the emperor.

III. Behavior in a World of Opposition (1 Pet. 4:1-5).

1. Arm for the conflict (v. 1). Christians are engaged in a tremendous conflict with evil forces within and without. Satan and his angels are bent on the believers' defeat and destruction.

2. The salutary effect of suffering (v. 1). Suffering has a remedial effect upon God's children. The one who suffers with Christ as an example will have the consciousness that it is his identity with Christ that calls forth the opposition of the world.

3. God's will the regulating force of his life (v. 2). The will of God, not the lusts of the flesh, is the directing force of the believer's life.

4. The consciousness of a wasted life (v. 3). Looking back upon a wasted life in serving the lusts of the flesh will move one to give no more time to serving such a master.

5. The attitude of the world toward the one who separates himself from it (v. 4). The world speaks evil of those who will not go its way. The world not only wonders at the life of the Christian who separates himself from its pleasures, such as dancing, card playing, wine drinking, etc., but will heap upon him nicknames of reproach.

6. Account shall be given (v. 5). The Christian should so live as to be able to render a good account to God.

Fellowship With God
Every mental movement and religious activity of life should be a heartfelt plea for deeper and sweeter fellowship with God.

Need of the Day

The greatest need of today is a renaissance of character among the people of this distracted earth; a renaissance of that quality of character which recognizes obligations as an honest man recognizes his debts, and of the quality of faith that gives us the desire and the courage to help instead of to hide.

Belief Imperative
An optimistic view of life is a hollow sham unless it is based on a belief in human immortality.

The Nation's Creator

The above, a hitherto unpublished picture of the Father of His Country, is a study for "George Washington Crossing the Delaware," by Emanuel Leutz. It is one of a collection of paintings by famous American artists which had long been stored in a Manhattan warehouse.

FOR PEACE AND Honesty

IT HAS become a revered custom on Washington's birthday to take a moment's halt in the rushing tides of modern events and to find fresh inspiration in recalling to mind the ideals, the warnings, the hopes and the visions with which he, in the serenity, the courage, the sincerity of purpose and the unbiased judgment that were characteristic of his public career, launched the newly liberated nation of colonial states in the troubled and uncertain waters upon which it was venturing and delivered it into the custody of his successors in the trust. Clearly beyond the confusions of succeeding political dynasties, observes a writer in the Kansas City Star, stands out the personality of this first President and his utterances of hope and warning seem as significant and potent today.

A great, a solitary figure, a symbol of the cause for which he fought, a personification of the constitutional foundations upon which he helped to place his conceptions of an ideal democratic government, he stands out at the head of the long line of presidential leaders an enduring inspiration even to the present day. If he had the temper of a man, he knew how to use it and control it. When plotting army officers and scheming politicians sought to undermine his influence and his ability as a commander, he put his devotion to his cause above his personal feelings and turned the tide against them by his dignified forbearance and forgiveness.

Let us recall some of his words, amidst our world troubles and misunderstandings, written to his friend, Benjamin Harrison:

"My first wish is to see war, this plague to mankind, banished from off the earth."

"Of all the animosities which have existed among mankind, those which are caused by difference of sentiments in religion appear to me the most inveterate and distressing and ought to be deprecated. I was in hopes that the enlightened and liberal policy which has marked the present age would at least have reconciled Christians of every denomination so far that we should never again see their religious disputes carried to such a pitch as to endanger the peace of society."

"It has always been a source of serious reflection and sincere regret to me that the youth of the United States should be sent to foreign countries for the purpose of education. I have greatly wished to see a plan adopted by which the arts, sciences and belles-lettres could be taught to their fullest extent here, with the means of acquiring the liberal knowledge necessary to qualify our citizens for the exigencies of public as well as private life."

"The more I am acquainted with agricultural affairs, the better pleased I am with them. I am led to reflect how much more delightful to an undebauched mind is the task of making improvements on the earth, than in the vain glory which can be acquired from ravaging it by a career of conquests."

"This government, the offspring of our own choice, uninfluenced and unawed, adopted upon full investigation and mature deliberation, completely free in its principles, in the distribution of its powers, uniting within itself a provision for its own amendment, has a just claim to your confidence and your support."

"Towards the preservation of your government and the permanency of your present happy state, it is requisite, not only that you discountenance oppositions to its acknowledged authority, but also that you resist with care the spirit of innovation upon its principles, however specious the pretensions."

"It is our true policy to steer clear of permanent alliances with any portion of the foreign world; so far, I mean, as we are at liberty to do it; for let me not be understood as capable of patronizing infidelity to existing engagements. I hold the maxim no less applicable to public than to private affairs, that honesty is always the best policy."

"Harmony and a liberal intercourse with all nations are recommended by policy, humanity and interest. But even our commercial policy should hold an impartial hand, neither seeking nor granting exclusive favors or preferences, consulting the natural course of things, diffusing and diversifying, by gentle means, the streams of commerce, but forcing nothing."

"Of all the dispositions and habits which lead to political prosperity, religion and morality are indispensable supports. . . . It is substantially true that virtue or morality is a necessary spring of popular government. The rule, indeed, extends with more or less force to every species of free government. Who that is a sincere friend to it, can look with indifference upon attempts to shake the foundation of the fabric?"

"Promote then as an object of primary importance institutions for the general diffusion of knowledge. In proportion as the structure of a government gives force to public opinion, it is essential that public opinion should be enlightened."

"As a very important source of strength and security, cherish public credit. One method of preserving it is to use it as sparingly as possible, avoiding occasions of expense by cultivating peace, but remembering also that timely disbursements to prepare for danger frequently prevent much greater disbursements to repel it."

"Observe good faith and justice towards all nations; cultivate peace and harmony with all; religion and morality enjoin this conduct; and can it be that good policy does not equally enjoin it? It will be worthy of a free, enlightened and, at no distant period, a great nation, to give to mankind the magnanimous and too novel example of a people always guided by an exalted justice and benevolence."

TRUE GHOST STORIES

By MADAME SCHUMANN-HEINK
MADAME SCHUMANN-HEINK's great spirit will not be daunted, just as her great voice still rings forth strong and clear. At the age of seventy, she is again meeting the caprices and demands of a daily song engagement before the public.

"Tell you a ghost story?" she replied in her deep, resonant voice. "Ach, I will tell you why Schumann-Heink spends Christmas Eve alone.

She rose to her feet. The bare, cold walls of her theater dressing room were flooded with the richness of her warm personality.

"Eight years ago this Christmas Eve I was in Chicago. When I returned to my hotel room, overlooking the lake, night had come. The room was dark. I sat by the window. From my chair I could look out over Michigan avenue into a park beyond. In the park I saw a great Christmas tree. It was beautiful, a giant evergreen, a hundred feet or more. Out of the night it brought me memories of other days when my children were young.

"As I looked at it, I began to pray, and I cried. I prayed to God to take care of my children who could not be with me this night.

"I prayed to him to do just one thing for me this night. To let me see, once again, the faces of my two boys who were gone, of my little Hans who died in my arms; of my dear, sweet August, who served as an officer on a submarine for Germany during the war and whose submarine went down and never was heard from. If he would only let me see those two dear boys—once again.

"As I prayed there came a cold wind against my cheek, just as though some one had opened an outside door. Quick, I wiped away my tears because I thought some one was coming into the room.

"I looked up. Before me were the faces of my boys, my Hans and my August! I stood up, I opened my arms to them, I screamed for joy—and the faces went away. Call this the imagination of a poor old woman, if you will, but I saw my boys! I saw my sweet boys!

"Every year now I will not go out on Christmas Eve. I will not allow anyone to come near my room. I wait, I pray, I hope for the return of those faces. Not since that day, eight years ago, have I seen them. I know, Schumann-Heink knows, that they will come again."

By GLENN HUNTER

Actor.

"I WAS with a heavy heart that I had to go to the theater every day to play a part, while my young brother lay desperately ill," related Glenn Hunter, famous portrayal of juvenile roles.

"At one part of the play the whole cast, with the exception of myself, was on the stage. This wait always occurred during a matinee, a few minutes before 4. I dreaded this wait. I did not want to be alone.

"Mary Boland's dressing room was nearest the telephone. I went into this dressing room hoping the phone would ring with a good message for me.

"The theater, off-stage, in the dressing rooms, was strangely quiet, except for the ticking of my watch. I took my watch out of my pocket. It was exactly 4 o'clock. I put it away.

"Then clearly, distinctly, came four slow, long knocks at my door. A pause separated each one. Quickly, I jumped to my feet and opened the door. There was no one in sight. I searched the dim corridor and could find no one. Shivers ran up and down my back. I asked the electricians and the stage hands if they had seen anyone going to or from the dressing room. They had not.

"The cue came for my entrance on the stage. Again I entered into my part.

"When I returned home I found my brother dead. I asked mother what time he died.

"Four o'clock," she said."

Earliest Game Laws

The earliest game laws in America probably were the hunting privileges granted in 1623 by the West India Co. to persons starting colonies in New Netherlands (New York), and the provisions regarding the right of hunting in the Massachusetts Bay Colonial Ordinance of 1647 and the New Jersey Concessions Agreement of 1673. The first federal game law was passed in 1832 and is the oldest one on the statute books. It was in force until the admission of Oklahoma as a state in 1907. It prohibited the capture of game in the Indian territory by any persons other than Indians, except for subsistence.—New York World-Telegram.

Matter of Cake

"Thomas, what is the matter with your brother?" asked the mother of the boys.

"He's crying," replied Thomas, "because I'm eating my cake and won't give him any."

"Is his own cake finished?" asked the mother.

"Yes, and he cried while I was eating that, too."

The Voice of the American Legion

By The Tinley Park Post No. 615
THE ARMY AND NATIONAL DEFENCE

No better explanation could be given, of the part our Army plays in our National Defense program, than was given in a recent speech delivered by Reserve Officer First Lieutenant E. J. Ulrich, of the 317th Cavalry.

We quote Lt. Ulrich's speech as follows:
"National Defense includes our Army, Navy, Air Corps and our boundary fortifications. I am limiting my remarks to the Army.

The National Defense Act of 1920 provides for three components of the Army: the regular army, the national guard, and the organized reserves. The Act provides for a regular army of 165,000 men and 14,000 officers. Our legislatures intended that in the event of a national emergency, the regular army shall be our first line of defense and delay the enemy attack until the other two components of the army arrive on the scene. Also, the regular army must provide trained specialists and technicians to assist in the training of recruits. All but confirmed pacifists will concede that a standing army of only 165,000 is exceedingly insufficient; and yet congress has seen fit to reduce the regular army to the inadequate number of 124,000 men. A hasty survey of the armies of Japan, Russia, Germany, Italy, and other countries will reveal the futility of relying upon our regular army to repel an armed invasion of our country. It is the duty of every citizen to encourage the American Legion in their efforts to have Congress increase the regular army to 165,000 men, which our National Defense Act calls for. Everyone should urge their Senators and Representatives to make the necessary appropriations.

The National Guard now numbers 171,000 men subject to bear arms for either their state or federal government. The National Guardsman trains one night each week and goes to summer camp for fourteen days training each year. The equipment and funds are furnished by the Federal Government. The greatest need of the national guard is better cooperation and support on the part of the general public and employers. Even though one of the principal functions of the guardsman is to protect industrial property in the event of strikes and riots, many employers will not permit employees to attend the two weeks summer training camps. The right kind of publicity would do much to improve the attitude of the general public and employers toward the national guard and stimulate the enlistment therein.

The third component of the army is divided into the Officers Reserve Corps, the Citizens Military Training Corps, and the Reserve Officers Training Corps. The Officers Reserve Corps, consisting of 114,000 officers, has been called the backbone of the army because upon it rests the responsibility of training raw recruits the arts of war in a very short time. The Citizens Military Training Corps, and the Reserve Officers Training Corps are two branches in which a reserve officer receives his first training. Pacifists should be discouraged in their attempts to remove the R. O. T. C. from our colleges and high schools. And the general public should be better informed of the great advantage of C. M. T. C. training for the youth of America.

In conclusion I wish to urge every one to support the American Legion and other organizations in their program for increased federal appropriations for National Defense. Especially the Regular Army and the Organized Reserves are in need of enlargement, modernization, and more active duty training. If funds were provided for the doubling of these two components of the army, our national defense forces would still appear as pitifully inadequate in comparison with the armed forces of other leading nations. We should never again repeat the tragedy of 1918 when men with three weeks training, were sent to the front even though they did not know how to load a rifle."

Commodore William Hicks sends us the one about two boys who were discussing their father's skill at games of chance. "Yes," one of them admitted, "your dad is good at poker, but why does he always lose on the horse races?" "Well, you see," replied the other boy, "dad never gets to shuffle the horses."

Hester had been in a railroad accident. The lawyer had just called. "What you-all want?" she asked. "I've come," said the lawyer, "to assist you in getting damages." "Damages, my foot!" shouted Hester. "I done got all the damages, I wants— what I crave is repairs."

TINLEY PARK

T. Y. O. GIRLS

Monday's Meeting

A special meeting of the T. Y. O. girls was held Feb. 4th. Eight members were present and our sponsor, Pearl Boldt. A number of new members were admitted to the club.

Any old furnishings donated to the TYO would be greatly appreciated.

TO MUCH NOISE—A number of hoodlums surrounded our club house and annoyed we serious thinkers by ringing the doorbell.

Thursday's Meeting

The TYO girls invited the TYO boys over to the club house Thursday night for a joint meeting. The boys had previously selected purple and white for their colors. Colors were voted on again at the joint meeting and purple and white were again selected. The girls and boys are to split on work and expenses. There is to be a joint social Feb. 16 at the clubhouse. The committee consists of Calvin Hirsch, Franklin Leman, Margaret Lorenz, Kathryn Hirsch.

After the joint meeting the girls had a business meeting. More new members were voted in.

We have our club house - pretty well furnished now. Members have brought chairs, sofas, lamps and other things to furnish the clubhouse.

Any high school girl from 14 to 20 wishing to join give their name to any of the members to bring up before a meeting to be voted on.

Girls don't forget our meeting next Thursday at the clubhouse.

We hear that a certain girl "M. M." is carrying around a black eye because of her snooty business.

CIRCLES

I love the circles in the clouds
When Fairies blow their soapbells through the sky;

I love the circle of flaming light,
When, wrapped in red, the sun
sinks down to die;

I love the pale circle of the moon
Wherein a maiden sits with golden hair;

I love the starry circle spots,
Their brightness, coldness....and their shudd'ring stare;

I love the circle of loving lips
Closed on my lips, to kiss my fears away;

I love the circles of dreaming eyes,
That float in mists and burst in magic spray;

I love what grasps, enfolds and holds:
Life's healthy touch, love's overpow'ring charms;

But... best I love... but most of all,
Around my neck, ...the circle of baby's arms.

MOKENA

Mrs. Everett Creer entertained in her home on Maple Street east of Marley Sunday afternoon at a post nuptial miscellaneous shower in honor of Mrs. John Bringelson of Crete. The honored guest was formerly Miss Hazel Last of Joliet, a former Joliet High school mate of Mrs. Creer, who was married December 31st and who is announcing her marriage now.

The afternoon was spent in playing games and contests in which prizes were awarded to Mrs. Arthur Hiller of Plainfield and Miss Irma Arnold of Joliet who in turn presented them to Mrs. Bringelson.

The rooms were decorated in the bride's colors of orchid and green. The dining table was lovely under a canopy created from a suspended wedding bell from which paper streamers in orchid and green radiated to the table. The guests numbered eighteen.

Many lovely gifts were presented to Mrs. Bringelson.

Mrs. Wm. Semmler, Mrs. J. V. Hall, Mrs. Robert Bechstein and Mrs. L. G. Bruder attended the Orland Park Woman's Club meeting last Thursday afternoon.

Miss Eleanor Hall who has been home from school a few days with a cold, returned to her studies in the Joliet high school Tuesday.

Misses Betty Bruder and Genevieve Pfleger entertained at an old fashioned party in the St. Mary hall Saturday evening. The guests which numbered fifty were dressed in the style of many years ago. Helen Cappel received the prize for the best costume.

Dancing was the diversion of the evening and later in the evening refreshments were served. All enjoyed a lovely time.

The Mokena Royal Neighbors held a pinochle party in the school auditorium Tuesday afternoon.

MOKENA SCHOOL NEWS

The pupils in Miss Doig's and Miss Ferguson's room are having a valentine party and box in their rooms on Thursday afternoon after recess.

Several pupils in the primary and intermediate room are out of school because of chicken pox.

Due to the icy roads, the game scheduled with Cete to be played last Friday night was postponed until Tuesday.

The pupils of the High School participated in a valentine party on Thursday afternoon in the gym. Dear Reader:

All the students of the school had their pictures taken by a photographer that came here. Some of the pupils liked the pictures while some didn't.

There once was a small boy that was to have his picture taken. He wouldn't sit still so the photographer said that if his mother would please step out a minute, he believed he could take the picture.

On the way home, the little boy's mother asked him what the nice man had said to him.

He replied, "Oh, he thaid, you thit thill, you little brat, or I'll knock your block off, tho I that thill."

We are studying sense organs in ga lkno thil gpros itm thcth mem physiology. The teacher asked "Name the organs of sense and their function."

Pupil, "Well, you see with the eye organ, hear with the ear organ, smell with the nose organ, feel with the finger organ and eat with the mouth organ."

Nerves

Do they torture you by day?
Keep you awake at night?

What is it that keeps hospitals open and doctors busy? NERVES.

What is it that makes your face wrinkled and makes you feel old? NERVES
Nine times out of ten it's NERVES that make you restless, worried, haggard.

Nerves

Do they make you Cranky,
Blue--give you Nervous Indigestion, Nervous Headache?

When nerves are over-taxed, you worry over trifles, find it hard to concentrate, can't sit still.
Nerve Strain brings on Headache.

Nervous people often suffer from Indigestion.
There may be absolutely nothing wrong with the organs of digestion, but the Nerves are not on the job to make the organs do their work properly.

Nerves

Do they interfere with your work; ruin your pleasure; drive away your friends?

You're cheating yourself and the man who pays you if you work when your NERVES are not normal.

You can't have a good time when you are nervous.
You can't make or keep friends when you are keyed up and irritable. You may excuse yourself, but to others you are just a plain crank.

Quiet your nerves with Chicken thieves have been busy in this section the past week. They visited the Arthur Beagley farm near Orland and stole 48 Rhode Island red pullets.

The Orland post-office is being beautified with a new coat of paint.

Mrs. Russell who has been ill is improving.

The masquerade ball given by the Orland Park Post of the American Legion last Saturday night at the Bachelor Grove Ball room was a big success and was very well attended.

The usual routine business of the village board was enlivened Monday night when Dr. W. R. Schussler appeared before the board and stated that a move is on foot to take the Southwest Highway away from Orland Park and route it over route 4.

A committee was to go with Dr. Schussler to see the county engineers regarding this proposed change and to do all they can to prevent this change from being made.

The Orland Park Legion Post held their monthly meeting Tuesday evening.

ORLAND SCHOOL NEWS

DESIGN HAS ALL THE BEST POINTS OF HOUSE DRESS

PATTERN 9083

Believe it or not, there's a four-point plan of convenience and flattery included in this neatly styled house dress. Let's add them up. First: the bodice may be worn with the contrasting rever, as shown in the larger sketch, or it may button all the way up to a smart point. Second: the sleeves boast little inverted pleats, jaunty to look at and very comfortable when working. Third: the slenderizing line sweeping down the middle front of the frock ends in another inverted pleat to give the slim skirt adequate fullness. And finally, the patch pockets with their important buttons are both useful and chic!

Pattern 9083 may be ordered only in sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 36 requires 4 yards 36 inch fabric and 3/4 yard contrasting. SEND FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, the STYLE NUMBER and SIZE. Complete, diagrammed sew chart included. Send your order to Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 232 West Eighteenth Street, New York, N. Y.

SYNOPSIS

Theodore Gatlin decides to adopt a baby in a final effort to solve his matrimonial troubles.

She was a pretty child, of olive complexion, with very dark blue eyes and rich, shiny, jet black hair. She was unusually intelligent and affectionate, of quick sympathy and winning, gracious ways. She was the apple of Mr. Gatlin's eye, and by the time she was ten years old he no longer cared a snap of his finger for his wife.

If Penelope was Mr. Gatlin's refuge, he also was hers. She never complained to him—doubtless because she feared her foster mother, who had succeeded in inculcating in the child a duty quite out of proportion to the lady's deserts. Nevertheless it was understood between them that they were a pair of outlaws; mutual sympathy drew them closer together each day; their mutual love was a sweet and holy sentiment.

Mr. Gatlin's nerves did not improve through the years, although when Penelope was ten years old, a wandering evangelist came to town and commenced a furious campaign of conversion and curing by prayer every disease that flesh is heir to; and Mrs. Gatlin became "converted." Thereafter, life for Mr. Gatlin and Penelope became almost unbearable.

In a moment of insane fury, Mr. Gatlin performed what he considered a long neglected duty. He took Mrs. Gatlin's classical countenance in both hands, bumped her head repeatedly against the wall and told her that if she ever opened her mouth again in his presence without his permission he'd just about kill her. She didn't. She sued him for divorce and had Penelope on the witness stand to prove that Mr. Gatlin had beaten her; that he had remained away from home until late at night and refused to reveal his rendezvous. Mr. Gatlin entered a cross-complaint and petitioned to have Penelope allocated to him.

Unfortunately the judge was a pudding-head. He refused to accept Mr. Gatlin's explanation that he had laid hands on Mrs. Gatlin but once, and that only in a moment of frenzy. But he did not state where he had been in the habit of spending his evenings so suspiciously. He couldn't afford to. He was a prominent business man. However, the judge should have known. Probably he did, but even so he was unsympathetic. He granted Mrs. Gatlin the divorce, liberal alimony and the custody of Penelope; whereupon the honorable court was treated to the spectacle of Mr. Gatlin and Penelope weeping in each other's arms. However, Mr. Gatlin was permitted to have Penelope to himself two Sunday afternoons in each month and one-half of each school vacation.

The first Sunday afternoon Mr. Gatlin availed himself of this privilege, his quondam spouse had hysterics, for with the malevolence of a devil Mr. Gatlin announced he was taking Penelope to a ball game. He took her, too, and they had a gorgeous time together until a home run sailed into the bleachers and struck Penelope violently on her pretty little nose. Mr. Gatlin, with the unconscious form in his arms, fled to a hospital, where he was foolish enough to telephone Mrs. Gatlin what had occurred. She appeared on the scene and carried Penelope home at once.

Mr. Gatlin knew what she was up to. She was going to cure Penelope's fractured nose by faith—and he had no faith in such therapy. He followed with a doctor, demanding at the front door to be admitted—a request which was ignored. So he kicked in the panels of the front door, which he had no business to do because it was no longer his, Mrs. Gatlin having acquired it in the property settlement. Thereupon she summoned the police by telephone and had him arrested, and the next morning he was tried, found guilty and placed under bond of a thousand dollars to remain away from the place for one year.

He didn't do it, because he knew what would happen to Penelope if he did. And he could afford a thousand dollars—fifty thousand dollars if need be—to prevent that! He attacked within twenty-four hours—at night, but he was quiet about it. He remembered he had never surrendered his latch-key, so he entered quietly and kidnapped Penelope.

Within two hours he was arrested en route to a San Francisco hospital in a motor car with Penelope. For disobeying the magistrate, he was adjudged guilty of contempt of court, his bond of a thousand dollars forfeited—and he was sentenced to thirty days in the county jail. Mrs. Gatlin preferred a charge of kidnapping against him, which is a felony, and since Mr. Gatlin knew he would be tried on that charge when he emerged from jail he improved the shining hours by swearing to a warrant charging Mrs. Gatlin with insanity. Promptly she was brought before a board of alienists who declared her sane, and in order to avoid investigation into Mr. Gatlin's charge that she was denying Penelope medical attention, she turned her house over to an agent and disappeared—with Penelope.

From his cell in the county jail, Mr. Gatlin issued orders to his attorneys to find Penelope and take legal steps to prevent his ex-wife from removing her again beyond the jurisdiction of the court that had granted their divorce. A diligent search of three months failed of its object, so Mr. Gatlin neglected to deposit any alimony to his ex-wife's credit. He knew she could manage very well without the alimony. But he also knew Louise. She would have what was coming to her or know the reason why.

When six months had passed, Mr. Gatlin decided he had never been acquainted with her, for she failed to make any demand upon him for her alimony; hence he realized she preferred, by keeping Penelope from him, to cause him the maximum of suffering rather than reveal her whereabouts by making a claim for the alimony due her. A year and a day from the date of the granting of her interlocutory decree, her attorneys petitioned for the final decree, which was granted. Mr. Gatlin thereupon discovered she was living in Paris.

This news brought him no comfort. She was beyond reach of United States law. However, he had detectives place her under surveillance. They reported her as living alone, so Mr. Gatlin concluded she had placed Penelope in a school.

One day the detective agency sent him a very good snapshot of a little girl and asked him if this was the child he was seeking. The agency was unable to recognize in her the original of the photographs he had sent them.

When Mr. Gatlin gazed upon that photograph, he wept. Mrs. Gatlin's faith cure, as he had suspected it would, had proved wholly ineffective. In his agony, the words of the poem came back to him:

And you, my sweet Penelope, out there somewhere you wait for me,
With buds of roses in your hair and kisses on your mouth.

He sold his retail shoe business and placed all of his assets in a trust fund, the income to be paid to him during his lifetime and to Penelope after his death. He saved out of this trust fund, however, ten thousand dollars, with which he purchased a letter of credit and a ticket to Cherbourg.

In the interim Mr. Gatlin's detectives had ascertained that Penelope was in a school in Switzerland; he planned to go to that school, abduct Penelope and—his plans were a trifle hazy, but he intended to mature them as he crossed the Atlantic. Once in possession of Penelope, he would see to it that she should never know unhappiness again, if any effort of his could prevent it. He was worth half a million dollars—half in cash and the remainder in real estate that was rapidly appreciating in value. He could afford to retire. They would go somewhere and lose themselves.

En route to the station—the first leg of his journey—the automobile in which he was riding was struck by another car and turned over. Mr. Gatlin was thrown out and suffered a basal fracture of the skull, from which he died six hours later.

CHAPTER II

Stephen Burt, M. D., was the sort of man whose waiting room always would have been crowded, even if he had not been one quarter as capable as his colleagues knew him to be. He was a man of sweet simplicity, absolute honesty and overwhelming sympathy; in short, he possessed the ideal personality for a successful physician.

Miss Lanning was his office nurse. In training schools for nurses—at least it was so in the hospital where Miss Lanning was trained—nurses and interns develop the sort of democracy and comradeship which delights in nicknames—and in dispensing with formality. Quite early in her professional career, therefore, Miss Lanning became known as Lanny. She was a not very good looking, capable, tremendously intelligent, forceful, driving person, exactly the type that would inevitably become an old maid.

When Lanny was thirty years old and Stephen Burt was sixteen, she had him for a patient. He had measles. "What a nice, well-mannered boy!" she thought, the first day she had him. "What a dear lad!" she reflected the second day. "What a good, kind, considerate patient!" she exclaimed to the doctor on the third day. "He must have had a sweet, sensible mother."

"Perhaps," the doctor had replied. "I never knew her and neither did the boy. She died at his birth. He's marveled. His father is an old friend and patient of mine."

"Has he a stepmother?" Even then, Lanny realized she would be a victim of a pang of jealousy if the doctor answered in the affirmative, for already the boy had aroused her maternal instinct. She was relieved to learn that his father had foisted no such trial upon the boy.

On the fourth day of his illness she called him "dearie." On the fifth day, when she proffered him castor oil, he rebelled; but when Lanny said: "Now, darling, I'll feel bad if you refuse to obey me," the boy had been instantly contrite.

"I'm sorry, Lanny," he apologized. "I'm a pig to oppose you." And then he groaned and took it—and Lanny kissed him and wanted to weep over him because he was such a dear and hadn't any mother—not even a stepmother!

"Lanny," he said to her on the seventh day, "do you know I love you a lot? I wish dad would marry you, so you could be with me all the time."

Lanny's heart swelled with the poignant grief of her baffled maternity at that honest boyish avowal.

On the eighth day he developed double pneumonia, as a sequel to the measles. He almost died—and so did Lanny. The doctor swore—and so did Stephen's father—that nothing but Lanny's devoted nursing brought him through. She wept the day she realized if she drew another day's salary as his nurse, she would be accepting money under false pretenses; and she wept on two counts. First, because she was leaving Stephen, and second, because Stephen's father insisted on being too grateful for her services.

"There is a reward due you, Miss Lanning," he told her, "over and beyond the trifling remuneration given you in exchange for your devoted services. That's a debt Steve and I can never repay, but the boy thinks we ought to make a pretense at payment and so do I." And he opened her hand-bag and slipped an envelope in it.

When she got back to the nurses' home, where she lived between calls, she discovered he had given her five thousand dollars! Young Stephen had already given her his photograph, indorsed: "To my dear Lanny, with love from Steve."

Nursing is the most personal and impersonal profession in the world. Lanny never expected to see Stephen Burt again, but she sent him at Christmas a four-ounce Fairy fishing rod from Hardy's in London. It cost her a month's wages. She knew his father was a fishing enthusiast and would probably inculcate the same enthusiasm in his boy. Steve had sent her roses on her birthday; and his love, by telegraph, Christmas eve, together with an exquisite little watch to replace the dollar timepiece she used to count pulse beats. On New Year's day, a year later, he made a formal call and she was out on a case; so the day she was relieved she called upon him.

"Hello, Lanny," he said—and kissed her. "I wanted to see you to get some advice. Do you think, Lanny, that I'd make a half decent doctor?"

"God made you for a doctor," Lanny assured him. "You'll not have to be more than a mediocre doctor to be financially successful. You were born with the ideal personality."

"Thanks, Lanny. I want to be a doctor, but I want to be a good one, too, so you tell me what I am to do about it. I've just graduated from high school. Made the honor roll," he confessed shyly.

"How far up the honor roll?" Lanny's query had almost a fierce quality in it.

"Number one." "And you were out of school two months of your last term. I'm proud of you, Steve."

"Where shall I go to college, Lanny?" "Where do you intend to practice when you're a doctor, Steve?"

"Right here, in San Francisco." "In that event you should attend a local university. You'll go to Stanford university," Lanny decided. "If you graduate with honor there you're bound to get an internship in Stanford University hospital. About two years of that and you'll know what you want to specialize in, so off you'll go for a post-graduate course in Berlin, Vienna and London for four years. Then you'll return and I'll be your office nurse and manager. How's that for a program?"

"Just dandy, Lanny." "It means ten years of grind, Steve, but don't let time frighten you," she warned anxiously. "Once you know what you know and know that you know it, others will not be long discovering it also, and you'll be years ahead of the half-baked medical dunces this medical world is cursed with."

He flattered her immensely by taking her to luncheon and the matinee. TO BE CONTINUED.

Build on Faith and Trust

Writer's Opinion Is That Vows to Keep Faith, and to Be Honest, Are All That May Reasonably Be Exchanged at Matrimonial Altar.

By HELEN WELSHIMER, in the New York World-Telegram.

Mrs. Virginia Overshiner Cogswell announces that she is disillusioned about men and marriage. Why shouldn't she be? She says she wants to terminate her seventh marriage. To take back your heart seven times is a procedure monotonous enough to bore anyone.

While Mrs. Cogswell's attitude is not difficult to understand, the contention remains that it isn't sporting of her to tell girls, "Don't marry!" Not every one tries seven times without finding a satisfactory husband. By a little pre-marital consideration, a man and woman can often determine whether the chemical allure which drew them together has a chance for survival.

Certainly no man and woman—though their marriage score be seven times seven—must continue the nuptial relationship when love has vanished and isn't expected back. Dictates of sound judgment, good taste and health suggest that such people at least live apart.

First of all, two enamored human beings should determine whether their affection for each other is real or synthetic. It is best to fashion wedding garments only when love is all wool, a yard wide, guaranteed not to shrink, fade or run.

Compatibility—mental, physical and spiritual—is an important marital prerequisite. People who have been reared with a common background, who have a community of tastes and interests, who have studied the same textbooks and found the same answers to their problems, have a much better chance of success than those who represent different worlds.

Adoration is a nice part of love. But when there is nothing but a tender emotion, it is surprising how quickly small differences can toughen it.

Two people who believe that they can follow their own interests apart from the affection bestowed on each other soon find that the moments of worship in each other's presence have lost their savor. Anybody can worship a honey-colored idol on a shelf or admire a colored glass window in a cathedral. But when you marry you must observe that the object of your devotion can't sit forever on a pedestal.

Probably the greatest mistake that people make is to take the marriage ceremony literally. Two people promise to love, cherish and protect each other until death parts them.

The first vow should be cut. No one can promise to love anyone else forever. We can promise to keep faith, to be honest and honorable, to cherish our affection, to guard it and nurture it. But if it passes with the spring or summer, all we can do is surrender with grace. We cannot bank on finality in any human relationship.

The Bible, which says that two people shall become one flesh, makes no mention of one heart or one soul. After all, marriage can't succeed if love is held with bonds. It has to be a voluntary offering. We can't restrain the wind, the tide, the rain, the spring, or love. Love, most of all, it comes and goes at the giver's bidding.

But love is not as variable a quality as we may suppose from this freedom of disposal. When two people's hearts click, and those two are understanding and compatible and respect each other's freedom as individuals, the chances are that love will last.

A marriage built on a cornerstone of possessiveness may topple in the first high wind. But one erected on faith and trust will stand, although the waters rise, the winds blow and the storms come.

The last few years of economic sacrifice and struggle have taught youth—and youth's parents, too—that it is considerably more important for two people to be able to laugh together, weep together and plan together than to have frosted rolls in the cupboard and several cars in the garage. Marriage has to be woven from spiritual stuff rather than material. Or it will fall down—seven times out of seven!

Love, in brief, can't be put on a mercenary standard. It requires respect more than adulation.

If, having come to marriage prepared, Mrs. Cogswell found unhappiness in seven instances, fate has played her a distinctly raw deal. We don't blame her at all for warning other women against the glorified state. But it is nice to know that most people have had better luck!

Help Scientific Study

Minature earthquakes, created by setting off small charges of dynamite, are helping scientists study deep-lying rock structures of the earth, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. Sensitive instruments record the "earthquakes." By studying the effects of these explosions it is possible to locate accurately underlying strata of rock as deep as 40,000 feet below the surface. The apparatus also is used to locate earthquake faults, to study the velocity with which earth tremors are propagated, to locate oil shale and to measure the depth of alluvial deposits. Dynamite charges vary from one to forty pounds. The explosive and recording instruments are carried on a special truck outfitted by scientists of the California Institute of Technology.

Three Simple Steps to Ease a Sore Throat in Three Minutes

1. Crush and stir 3 BAYER Aspirin Tablets in ½ glass of water.

2. Gargle Thoroughly—throw your head way back, allowing a little to trickle down your throat. Do this twice. Do not rinse mouth.

3. If you have a cold, take 2 BAYER Aspirin Tablets. Drink full glass of water. Repeat if necessary, following directions in package.

Modern Scientific Method Wonderfully Easy

REMEMBER PICTURES HERE

Here's a safe, modern and effective way to relieve sore throat. A way that eases the pain, rawness and irritation in as little as two or three minutes. Many doctors advise it and millions are following this way. Try it.

All you do is crush and stir 3 BAYER Aspirin Tablets in ½ glass of water and gargle with it twice—as pictured here. (If you have signs of a cold, take BAYER Aspirin and drink plenty of water.)

Get real BAYER Aspirin Tablets for this purpose. They disintegrate quickly and completely, making a gargle without irritating particles.

BAYER Aspirin prices have been decisively reduced, so there's no point now in accepting other than the real Bayer article you want.

We Have Paid For Our Tickets,

Now Let Us Watch The Show

There is an old saying about the hand of God being responsible for some definite action or result.

The present period of our generation, with all its economic distress and difficulties, seems to be a most appropriate time for this axiom to assert itself.

Our problems are so complicated and present so many different tangents of opinion as to be subject to severe criticism no matter what your argument may be. As a mental diversion, let us take a little different and hopeful view of the situation in general.

With an open mind, we will put ourselves above the chaotic perplexity of opinions and bitter criticisms and take a seat in the balcony to view the show.

Through the ages the laws of God and natural justice have, in bigoted instances, always asserted themselves and triumphed.

The ancient Arabic civilization, Roman culture, Caesar and Napoleon were all advocates of the theory that might makes right, which paves the way for greed to unbalance better judgment and ultimately to the swift counteracting justice of God's hand.

This holds true not only in things political or personal but also in business.

Reflect upon Ivan Krueger, the Swedish match king and our own Samuel Insull. Have we not the same situation, in principal, in the case of our present controlled monopolies of retail trade?

They gobble up the biggest bulk of the retail trade of this country by means of their power, money and influence both political and private.
Through this same means they control a large percentage of the manufactured goods. This in turn makes it impossible for the manufacturer to pay his workers a decent, living wage.

It does not matter what your business may be, in the long run, this vicious garrote will strangle the pleasure of living out of your life.

Advance information, received only this past week, informs us that one tenacle of this octopus, namely the dime stores, in 38 states of the union are now contemplating a complete drop department for each one of their stores. No prescription dept. Oh no! That would require the services of a registered pharmacist and a salary of maybe about $20.00 per week according to their standards of a living wage.

So girls working for about $5 or $6 per week, who don't know the difference between epsom salts and boric acid, will service you with drugs for you and your children.

The vast corporations of human enslavement become bigger and richer and bloated with their own power while the people become poorer and more destitute. Things can naturally develop and grow up to the limit of their capacity and then they begin to topple.

A flower will grow straight upward to the limit of its structure to up hold it and then drop downward toward the earth again.

All things, animate or inanimate, can destroy itself by its very size alone. Through the history of the ages this has been proven over and over again. This is the hand of God. This is the show we are waiting to see The snail like progress, but deadly certainty of the whip of justice can not be denied.

When our blindfold queen of Destiny slashes down her sword upon our wheel of intervenes lives, to cut off the unhealthy, festering humps and make smooth again our circle of existence, we want to be high up in the amphitheatre so as not to be soiled with the blood of the operation.

Considering the so-called bargain prices, do you think you are doing justice to yourself, your children and your neighbor by trading at the chain stores?

The manufacturer, in most cases, depends on his profits derived from the sale of his goods to the independent business man. If he had to depend on the profit from his sale to the chain stores to pay his help, nobody would have a job.
